

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE CORCORAN GALLERY OF ART

ISTORY OF THE CORCORAN GALLERY OF ART.

THE CORCORAN GALLERY OF ART, including ground, building, its contents, and endowment fund, is the gift of the late Mr. William Wilson Corcoran to the public. In his own words to the Trustees to whom the property was deeded May 10, 1869, "it was designed for the encouragement of the Fine Arts;" and in the deed the object of the Institution is stated as "the perpetual establishment and encouragement of Painting, Sculpture, and the Fine Arts generally," with the condition that it should be open to visitors without any pecuniary charge whatever at least two days in each week, with authority to charge for admission at other times such moderate and reasonable fee as may be prescribed, the proceeds arising therefrom to be applied to the current expenses of the Institution.

The Institution was chartered by act of Congress May 24, 1870. By that act the building and its contents were declared exempt from all taxation.

The building was designed by Mr. James Renwick, architect, and begun in 1859, but before completion, early in 1861, it was occupied by the United States Quartermaster-General's Department until 1869.

On the 10th of May, 1869, its owner placed it in the hands of a board of nine Trustees for the purposes already named. After the Institution was incorporated by Congress, in 1870, the general work of reconstruction and adaptation of the building to its original purpose was begun, and finished in 1871.

On the 22d of February, 1871, Mr. Corcoran gave a grand ball and reception in the building in honor of the day, the proceeds of which he presented to the fund of the Washington Monument Society. In 1873 a Trustee went to Europe empowered to purchase works of art for the Gallery, and Mr. Corcoran's private collection of pictures and statuary was then placed in it. On November 6, 1873, the Board of Trustees completed the organization of the Institution.

On the 19th of January, 1874, the Picture Galleries, Octagon Room, and the Hall of Bronzes were thrown open for private exhibition by day and night, Mr. Corcoran receiving the congratulations of his friends upon the fulfilment thus far of his munificent plans.

On April 29, 1874, the Halls of Sculpture and of Bronzes were opened to the public, and in December, 1874, the two side galleries of sculpture adjoining the Main Hall; so that all the rooms of the Institution for exhibition purposes were then opened to the public.

FIRST FLOOR.

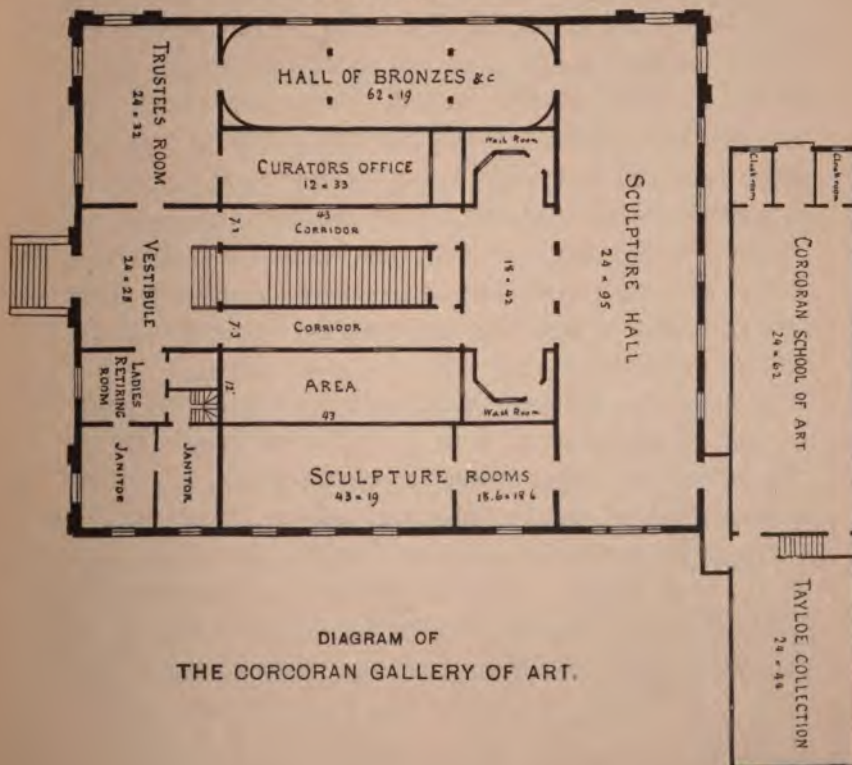

DIAGRAM OF
THE CORCORAN GALLERY OF ART.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BUILDING.

The building stands on the north-east corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth street, fronting 106' 7" on the Avenue and 125' 6" on Seventeenth street. It is two stories in height, in the Renaissance style, built of brick, with brown-stone facings and ornaments, a Mansard roof rising 10 feet, having a large central pavilion and a smaller one at each corner facing the streets. The front, under the main and corner pavilions, is divided into recesses by pilasters with foliated capitals, and is ornamented with wreaths, with the monogram of the founder, and over the central pavilion is the inscription: "Dedicated to Art."

In the central pediment is a large bronze medallion profile portrait of Mr. Corcoran, with decorations of foliage, and on the tops of the two columns are bronze groups of children holding garlands, and the emblems of architecture and music.

On the front of the building are four, and on the side seven niches with statues 7 feet high. The first group contains those of Phidias, Raphael, Michael Angelo, and Albert Dürer; the latter those of Titian, Da Vinci, Rubens, Rembrandt, Murillo, Canova, and Crawford. They were executed by M. Ezekiel, a native artist. The bronze medallion of Mr. Corcoran and the groups of children are also his works.

A pair of colossal bronze Lions, one at either side, rest upon the stone coping of the steps at the entrance to the building. These were cast from moulds made over the famous lions by Canova, at the tomb of Clement XIII, in St. Peter's, Rome.

In the rear of the Gallery and facing upon Seventeenth street is a building 24 feet wide and extending back 106 feet, erected during the summer of 1889, for the accommodation of the Corcoran School of Art. This building is one story high in front, which portion contains three class-rooms, each lighted by an ample skylight. In the rear, on the first floor, is a room 24 x 44 feet, which communicates with the Sculpture Hall of the Gallery, and contains the Tayloe Collection, bequeathed to the Gallery by Mrs. B. O. Tayloe, of Washington, D. C. Over this is a room of the same size, for the life class of the School.

INTERIOR OF THE BUILDING.

On each side of the inner stairway a corridor, lighted from the open courts, leads to the vestibule of the Main Hall of Sculpture, with which the vestibule communicates through three arched entrances. This Hall, 95 x 24 feet, is lighted by windows on the north side, and opens into two adjoining galleries of sculpture on the east side of the building and into the room containing the Tayloe Collection. On the west side it opens into the Hall of Bronzes, &c., 62 x 19 feet. This last also communicates with the Trustees' room. The central portion of the ceiling of this Hall, panelled and richly decorated, is supported by four Corinthian columns, with gilt capitals. The height of this story is 19' 9".

The Picture galleries are in the second story. The ascent to the main gallery is a notable feature of the building. The stairway leads to an upper landing, with decorated arched ceiling, and Corinthian pilasters dividing the arched recesses over the eight windows, with spaces between.

The Main Picture Gallery is 95 feet by 44 feet, with a height of 24 feet to the cornice of the arched ceiling, and 38 feet to the inner skylight. The ceiling is richly frescoed and gilded. The scroll-work decoration is in the Italian style of the 16th century. In the middle of the panel opposite the main entrance is the figure of Minerva, and in the middle of the other panels the muses of Sculpture, Painting, and Architecture, all full length. Between them are medallion-portraits of Giulio Romano, Titian, Raphael, Rubens, Van Dyck, Dürer, M. Angelo, Holbein, Murillo, Cranach, Teniers, and Da Vinci. Between the brackets of the cornice are the names and dates of forty-six painters of different countries, from Cimabue to Fortuny. This decorative work was done by Mr. Vincenzo Stiepevich. All of the picture galleries are lighted from the roof, and supplied with ample electric lights for night exhibitions.

On the east and west sides of the building the Main Gallery opens into smaller ones, and these again into two corner galleries in the front of the building. Between the corner galleries, and immediately opposite the entrance to the Main Gallery, is the Octagon Room. It has a skylight, but is chiefly lighted by a south window, suitably screened, and contains a number of marble busts, with the Greek Slave, by Hiram Powers, as the central ornament.

The Gallery is open every day (Sundays, the Fourth of July, and Christmas day excepted), from 9.30 A. M. to 4 P. M. from October 1st to May 1st, and from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M. from May 1st to October 1st. On other public holidays from 10 A. M. to 2 P. M.

On holidays and TUESDAYS, THURSDAYS, and SATURDAYS the admittance is free.

On MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and FRIDAYS an admittance fee of 25 cents is charged.

Children under six years of age will not be admitted to the Gallery, and none between six and fourteen years will be admitted unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

For information concerning Copying, Art Education, &c., see Rules and Regulations, separately printed, to be had by application to the Curator.

Photographs of the principal paintings and other works of art in the gallery are for sale at the door, where a catalogue of them may be obtained.

The subject of this picture is as follows: Ulrich, son of Count Eberhard, had lost the battle of Reutlingen, and was dangerously wounded. Many of the nobility were slain. On his recovery he leisurely sought his father, at Stuttgart, and found him over his solitary meal. He was coldly received. Not a word was spoken. With downcast eyes he placed himself opposite his father. Fish and wine were served to him. The old count seized a knife, and cut the table-cloth between them. Frenzied by this insult, Ulrich rushed into the middle of the next fight, gains the battle of Doffingen, and is slain.—Ballad of Uhland.

“ And while we were celebrating the victory in our camp, what was our old Count doing? Alone in his tent, weeping over the dead body of his only son ! ”

CASTS FROM ANTIQUE SCULPTURE.

THE PARTHENON.

Plate I, page 55.

THE PARTHENON, a Doric temple of white marble, erected in honor of Minerva (Athene Polias), the tutelar deity of Athens, was completed in the year 438 B. C., 16 years after its commencement. The temple was built during the administration of Pericles, who employed Callicrates and Ictinus as architects under the direction of Phidias, to whom he entrusted all works of magnificence, and who embellished it with statues and bass-reliefs. It was 227 feet long, 101 wide, and 65 in height, with 8 pillars front and back, and 17 on each side; these pillars were 42 feet high and $17\frac{1}{2}$ in circumference, the distance between them being 7 feet 4 inches.

THE FRIEZE OF THE PARTHENON.

Plate I C.

This frieze, in low relief, ran around the top of the inner faces of the colonnade and outer wall of the cella of the temple, yet within and below the roof, and 39 feet above the pavement.

As the entablature above the outer columns descended 4 feet 9 inches below the lower edge of the frieze as it was placed on the wall, the frieze could only receive its light diffused between the columns and reflected upwards from the pavement of the colonnade. Owing to this circumstance, as well as to the peculiar position of the spectator when looking at the frieze, standing within the columns, the artist was forced to keep his relief very flat, so that it only rises $1\frac{3}{4}$ inches from the background, and at the highest points only $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches; moreover, it is owing to these circumstances that the relief was kept lowest in the lower parts of the frieze and highest in the upper parts, where even sometimes the background is sunk to gain a bolder relief. The frieze was over 522 feet in length, running around the four sides of the temple.

Around the cornice of the Main Statuary Hall of this Gallery is placed 194 feet of casts from the original marble slabs of this frieze. The windows break the continuity of the casts, but on the east and north walls between the windows will be observed seated deities (see 1001 to 1009), virgins with offerings, and fragmentary groups, with sacrificial oxen and charioteers; the reliefs on the west and south walls present an unbroken line of the young horsemen sweeping along, with here and there a dismounted group, varying the action of the cavalcade. This last section is arranged precisely as the originals stood in the Parthenon.

PEDIMENTS OF THE PARTHENON.

WESTERN PEDIMENT.

EASTERN PEDIMENT.

(Plate II.)

THE WESTERN PEDIMENT.

Plate II, page 58.

The myth here represented is as follows:

Athene and Poseidon both claim the patronage over the land of Attica; their claims are to be decided by some token, symbol, or sign of their power; and, according to various traditions, the judges who are to decide which of these tokens contains the weightiest claim to the patronage, are either the Olympian gods, or Kekrops the hero-king of Athens with his family, or the Attic people itself.

There is little doubt concerning the figures at the extreme angles of the pediment, which are generally admitted to be, on the left the river god Kephissos No. 7 l., with a nymph not extant, and at the right angle the nymph (Kallirrhoe) No. 7 r., with the river Ilissos No. 6 r. crouching beside her. The real doubt exists with regard to the remaining figures at either side. No. 1 on the l. is called by Michaelis and others, Kore holding the boy Iakchos (No. 2), who is turning towards the seated female figure Demeter (No. 3), while Nos. 4 and 5 are called in the British Museum, Pandrosos and Kekrops, and by Michaelis, Hygieia and Asklepios. The corresponding figures on the other side are called (No. 1) Leukothea with Palaemon and Eros in her arms, (No. 2) Aphrodite in the lap of (No. 3) Thalassa, No. 4 being a Nereid. The other system of interpretation, first formed by Brunn, makes all the figures on either side of Nike and Amphitrite partake of the nature of the river gods at either angle, considering them personifications of Attic locality. Of this pedimental group, fortunately drawn by Carrey in 1674, before the destruction of the Parthenon, only more or less fragmentary remains of Athene, Poseidon, Hermes, Amphitrite, perhaps Nike, and of 1, 6, and 7 r., and 4, 5, and 6 l. are extant in the British Museum.

1010 RIVER GOD, KEPHISSOS.

H. 2 ft. 8 in. L. 6 ft. 4 in.

Original Elgin Marble, 440 B. C. British Museum.

This figure stood in the north angle of the western pediment of the Parthenon, and is represented as raising himself on an arm from a recumbent position, to listen to the announcement of the triumph of Minerva over Neptune.

"This, one of the most famous specimens of Greek sculpture extant, shows the combination of perfect modelling and grandeur which marked the art of Phidias, and displays the care which was bestowed even upon works of mere decoration. Note for instance the remains of finish even on the back of the statue, which could never be seen in situ."

NOTE.—The measurements of the casts give the height of the statues and busts exclusive of their plinths or bases.

THE EASTERN PEDIMENT.

Plate II, page 58.

The subject represented in this pediment was, according to Pausanias, the birth of Athene. We cannot believe that the moment represented was that of the actual birth of Athene out of the head of Zeus, an incident sometimes quaintly rendered on archaic vases; nor can we believe that it was that immediately preceding the birth. It must have been the scene immediately succeeding the birth, when Athene stands fully armed before her father and the admiring gods, as described in the Homeric hymn to Athene.

In Carrey's time the centre of the pediment was no longer extant, and he could only give the figures at the wings as here rendered in Plate II, page 58; but there can be little doubt that the centre of the pediment was occupied by Zeus and Athene, with the chief Olympian gods and goddesses to their left and right.

In this plate all the extant figures from this pediment, now in the British Museum, are given, with the exception of a nude male torso at Athens (Michaelis, VI, H. Guide Brit. Mus., Prometheus or Hephaistos, p. 16), and the torso of Nike (?), which has before been ascribed to the western pediment. No. 1 l., the draped female figure rapidly striding towards the angle, is admitted by all to represent Iris, the fleet messenger of the gods, bringing the news of the great event from the dwelling of the gods to the figures seated in the angle. In the case of this, as in that of the western pediment, there are two main groups of interpreters: those, namely, who see in the figures of the angles gods or heroes, and those who consider them to form subdivisions of the composition as a whole, clearly to be distinguished from the central group, and to be personifications of nature in keeping with the character of the chariot-driving figures at the extreme angles, which are admitted by all to represent the sun god and the moon goddess.

Accordingly the seated figures, 2 and 3 l., would be, after Brunn, the two Horae who watch the gates of Olympus, the reclining nude male figure, 4 l., would be the mountain god Olympus, while the hitherto generally accepted interpretation for the two female figures, has been Demeter and Persephone, and for the male figure, Theseus, Dionysos, or Herakles. Nos. 5 and 6 l. are universally admitted to represent Helios, the sun god, driving his chariot.

No. 2 r. represents Hestia, the goddess of the human hearth, while the female figure 4 r., reclining on the knees of her seated companion 3 r., is the sea, Thalassa, resting on the lap of the earth, Gaia. The current names given to these three figures are the Three Fates, who were supposed to be present at the birth, and are thus figured on the late reliefs in Madrid and Dresden; 5 and 6 r., are admitted to represent Selene, the moon goddess, driving her chariot.

In the western pediment, the myth represented shows Athene in her local association with Athens; while in the eastern pediment, the birth of Athene from the head of Zeus has an universal association with mankind. The one scene is local, the other cosmical, as the river gods with nymphs framing one scene, and the sun and moon framing the other, certainly indicate, and as the remaining figures probably do.

It must be remarked, that the prevailing difference of opinion in assigning definite names to the single figures of these pediments, is due not only to the fact that we have no passage in ancient authors mentioning them, but that the fragmentary condition of the statues has not even supplied us with the symbols which they held in their hands, and which made their meaning clear to every child in ancient Athens.

The Parthenon appears to have remained in its original condition until the 5th or 6th century of our era, when it was converted into a Christian church, at first of St. Sophia, then of the Virgin Mary. The alterations necessitated by its new dedication chiefly concerned the interior of the temple, and had little effect upon the sculptured decorations. The entrance was transplanted from the east to the west, an apse was built at the east end, and two niches were placed in the tympanum of the western pediment. At the beginning of the 13th century it was converted from a Greek orthodox into a Roman Catholic church, and in 1458 it was turned into a Turkish mosque, a minaret being added to the west end of the south wall. On the whole, the building and the sculptured decorations remained comparatively intact until the latter part of the 17th century, when all nationalities combined in destroying it. In September 1687, during the war between the Republic of Venice and Turkey, the Venetian general, Francisco Morosini, with an army chiefly of mercenary troops of all nationalities, under the immediate command of Count Koenigsmark, a Swedish general, laid siege to Athens, and bombarded the Acropolis, whither the enemy had withdrawn. Upon hearing that the Turks had stored powder in the Parthenon, on the 26th of September, 1687, at seven o'clock in the evening, a German lieutenant succeeded in sending through the roof of the Parthenon a shell, which ignited the powder and rent the great temple asunder, heaping fragments on either side. In the year 1800, Lord Elgin, then British ambassador to the Porte, having received permission, began his work of carrying off the Parthenon marbles. After years of the greatest vicissitudes, occasioning a vast expenditure of money on the part of Lord Elgin, the sculptures finally reached England in 1812, when, being forced to sell the collection, he offered it to the nation for the sum he had actually expended. At last it was purchased for £35,000, a sum less than half it cost him, and now forms the chief treasure of the British Museum.

The following 10 casts are arranged as nearly as possible in the position occupied by the original marbles in the east pediment of the Parthenon:

1011 HELIOS, WITH HIS HORSES.

Original Elgin Marbles, 440 B. C. British Museum.

At the extreme angle of the pediment the neck, arm, and shoulder of Helios, the sun god, rise out of the sea, and before him the heads and necks of his horses are advancing towards the centre (but one of the three horses is here represented). Though there are but small portions of the figures of horses and man, the bold upward motion is completely indicated, and the artist clearly suggests that the scene represented in the pediment takes its beginning at this side and concludes at the other.

1012 OLYMPUS, commonly called THESEUS.

H. 4 ft. 2 $\frac{3}{4}$ in. L. 5 ft. 9 in.

Original Elgin Marble, 440 B. C. British Museum.

The original reclined in an angle of the east pediment, and is universally acknowledged, alike by artists and by the outside world, to represent the highest stage of broad and monumental art in the representation of the nude male figure.

1013 TWO HORAE, commonly called CERES (or DEMETER) and PROSERPINA (or PERSEPHONE). H. ———.

Original Elgin Marble, 440 B. C. British Museum.

Guardians of the gates leading to the dwellings of the gods. The first of these two figures, in her more erect attitude and gesture, manifests the attention she is giving to the news brought by the messenger of the gods, Iris; the other figure, leaning on her shoulder, has not yet completely realized the importance of the scene enacted in the centre. Both these figures manifest in a high degree the characteristics of Pheidias art.

1014 IRIS.

H. 5 ft. 3 in. Original Elgin Marble, 440 B. C. British Museum.

The fleet messenger of the gods, rapidly descending from their abode to proclaim the birth of Athene, is here represented as a youthful female figure, clad in the Doric chiton open at the sides. A short mantle is flapping back in the wind, owing to her rapid motion, the indication of which is powerfully expressed in the whole composition.

1015 HESTIA. H. ———. Original Elgin Marble. British Museum.

The common view makes her one of the Three Fates; the left arm of this figure was probably raised behind the shoulder of Gaia and there held a sceptre; the simple and solemn attitude of this figure would well correspond with the nature of Hestia.

1016. THALASSA and GAIA, commonly called TWO OF THE THREE FATES. H. 4 ft. 11 in. L. 7 ft. 7 in.

Original Elgin Marble, 440 B. C. British Museum.

The original occupied a position in the angle of the eastern pediment opposite the Olympus. "Here the perfection of the modelling of the texture of drapery and the nude has been attained, and this not at the cost of the general breadth of composition. As regards the varied treatment of drapery, notice the folds of the cloth upon which Thalassa is reclining, with its broader surfaces, the more elaborate folding of the upper garment round the legs, and the varied play of smaller creases of the undergarment as it covers the breast, against the nude texture of which it is set off in bold contrast."

- 1017 HEAD of one of the horses of SILENE. H. 2 ft. 6 in.

Original Elgin Marble, 440 B. C. British Museum.

The head projected over the cornice of the eastern pediment, double holes behind the ears, on the nose, between the eyes and mouth, and on the inner corner of the mouth (not well represented in the cast) showed where the metal bridle had been affixed.

"This head has ever been held as the instance of sculpture in which the combination of actual truth to nature on the one hand and the insistence upon the broad, important, and general features, with the avoidance of purely individual and ephemeral traits, upon the other, has been successfully attained."

We are indebted for much of the foregoing matter relating to the Parthenon, to Stuart and Revett, Antiquities of Athens; to Dr. William Lübke, History of Sculpture; and to the writings of Charles Waldstein, Litt. D., Ph.D., L. H. D., Director of Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge.

- 1018 THE DISCOBOLOS (Quoit-thrower). H. 5 ft. 5½ in.

Original Bronze, in the British Museum.

The original statue was executed in bronze by Myron at the close of the first period of Greek sculpture, about 470 B. C., and is minutely described by Lucian and Quintilian. The discus was a round flat plate of metal or stone, about ten or twelve inches in diameter. There are several antique copies in marble of this figure, showing the head reverted. The copy from which this cast is taken was found in 1791, near Hadrian's Villa.

- 1019 DISCOBOLOS. H. 5 ft. 5¾ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original of this cast is by Naucydes, pupil of Polyclethus, who was a pupil of Phidias. The head is supposed not to have formed a part of the original figure. The fillet round the head was the badge of victory.

- 1020 VENUS OF MELOS. H. 6 ft. 8 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

The original of this cast was discovered in 1820, in the island of Milo, the ancient Melos, by a peasant, while digging near some sepulchral grottoes. The French consul tried to buy it, but a cunning monk (in disgrace with the Sultan) secured it as a peace offering to the Porte. While the statue was on its way to a ship, a French frigate arrived with a secretary of the French embassy, bearing orders to purchase and hurry it off. A fight occurred over it between the French sailors and natives, and the former carried off the prize. The peasant received six thousand francs for this invaluable statue, that went to Paris as a present to Charles X. It now stands in the Louvre, the pride of Paris, and the admiration of the world. Its sculptor is unknown, but by the grandeur of its style it is justly assigned to the era between Phidias and Praxiteles, and is considered the greatest statue of woman's form the world now holds. The plinth, the tip of the nose, and a small part of the lips are the only parts restored. Parts of an arm and hand were also found, but so mutilated that, though casts have been taken with them attached, the torso is declared by the world better as it is—the fulness of what is left, and its suggested action, being more satisfactory than any guess-work from an uninspired hand.

Mr. Ravaissou, keeper of the Antiques at the Louvre, thinks it probable that the statue is part of a group of Venus and Mars—"Love disarming War"—and he has made a cast, with the arms attached, which it is said confirms his theory. Then, again, it is asserted that a small bronze copy of it has been discovered in Pompeii representing her as looking at herself in a mirror held in her left hand.

Mr. Millingen, a Dutch antiquary, thinks it a Victory holding a shield with both hands, and Mr. Stillman, a recent critic, contends that it is the Wingless Victory that once stood in the Temple of Nikè-Apteros, Athens, and was sent to Melos at the time of a threatened invasion.

The Venus of Capua in the Museo Bourbonico, Naples, is like the Venus of Melos in general form, but has the head bent down and the left arm and empty hand extended towards a Cupid, who, with his bow, stands before her. It is believed to be a modified copy of the latter.

All these theories, however, are set at naught, and the action of the Venus of Melos settled, if there be truth in the following evidence of its condition when found, as quoted by O'Shea in his "Galleries of the Louvre." The eminent traveller, Dumont D'Urville, landed from the French frigate soon after its discovery, and, after an inspection, says in his account of it, published in 1821: "The statue was in two parts, and about six feet high, representing a nude female whose left hand (raised) held an apple, and the right one held up a tunic falling gracefully from the waist to the feet. However, they (the hands) were mutilated and separated from the body." An officer of the man-of-war, writing about the statue, says: "When M. D'Urville and myself saw the statue it had the left arm raised in the air, and holding in its hand an apple, and the right arm was broken at its narrow part—à la saignée." O'Shea also states that the forearm and hand holding the apple are in the store-room of the Louvre. This contemporary evidence seems to prove conclusively that the statue is a Venus Victrix in the contest for the apple with Juno and Minerva.

- 1021 VENUS DE MEDICI. H. 5 ft. Original Marble, in Florence.
Presented by J. C. McGuire.

This cast, though somewhat injured by exposure to the weather, is regarded as a perfect copy, its extreme fidelity having carried off a prize in Italy. The original stands in the Tribunal of the Uffizi, Florence. It was found in the 15th century, and carried to Venice during the reign of Cosmo di Medicis—hence its name. When found it was in thirteen pieces, and without arms. These were supplied, but it is supposed by many that the position of the original arms is not given in the substitutes. It was executed by Cleomenes of Athens at a period when Greek art was rapidly declining.

- 1022 VENUS OF THE CAPITOL. H. 5 ft. 11 in.
Original Marble, in the Capitoline Museum, Rome.

- 1023 ARIADNE DESERTED. H. 5 ft. 3½ in. L. 6 ft. 11½ in.
Original Marble, in the Vatican.

Ariadne, daughter of Minos, King of Crete, was married to Theseus, who deserted her at Naxos. She was afterwards loved by Bacchus, and married to him. For three centuries the statue adorned a fountain in the Vatican. It now stands on an ancient sarcophagus, the sides of which represent, in bass-reliefs, giants destroyed by thunderbolts. Lübke assigns the execution of this statue to the period of Augustus Cæsar.

- 1024 EUTERPE. H. 4 ft. 6 in.
Original Marble, in the Louvre. Was once in the Villa Borghese.
The Inventress of song and wind instruments.

- 1025 DIANA DI GABIA. H. 6 ft. 5. in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.
This statue takes its name from the place where it was found in 1792. It is also called Atlanta adjusting her robe.

- 1026 GENIUS OF THE VATICAN.
H. 2 ft. 9½ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

This work was found at Centocelli, between Rome and Palæstrina, and has been by some pronounced an Eros, or Cupid, by Praxiteles. It represents that dreamy state when the form is passing into young manhood.

- 1027 ABUNDANCE, or PLENTY.
H. 6 ft. 11 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

It has the cornucopia in the left hand, while the right holds a rudder resting on a globe, thus indicating Commerce as a source of Plenty.

- 1028 MINERVA. H. 7 ft. 3 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

This statue of the goddess of wisdom, of war, and all liberal arts is often called Minerva Medica. The serpent is a special attribute of Minerva as an emblem of wisdom. The griffin is also sacred to her, and appears on her helmet.

- 1029 GENIUS OF ETERNAL REST.

H. 5 ft. 11 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

The original of this cast formerly belonged to Cardinal Mazarin. The figure leans against a pine tree, the resin of which was used in funeral ceremonies.

- 1030 GERMANICUS. H. 5 ft. 11 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

Found on the Esquiline at Rome ; bought by Louis XIV.

Germanicus was emperor of the eastern division of the Roman Empire, A. D. 19, and celebrated for his military genius, learning, and benevolence. Some consider it to be a statue of a Roman orator, in the character of Mercury, the god of eloquence, of whom the tortoise below the drapery is an emblem. It is inscribed, "Cleomenes, son of Cleomenes, made this." The head is supposed by some not to be the original one. No published authority seems to have explained the action of the right arm and uplifted hand, holding a small substance like a bean. It is supposed that the figure represents some solemn decision by the vote of the emperor.

- 1031 ANTINOUS OF THE CAPITOL.

H. 5 ft. 10½ in. Original Marble, in the Capitol.

Antinous was a handsome youth, beloved by the Emperor Hadrian, to whom he was so much attached that he drowned himself in the Nile to save his imperial master from the death foretold to him, unless saved by such a sacrifice. Hadrian immortalized his favorite by raising temples and statues to his memory.

- 1032 THE FIGHTING HERO, or GLADIATOR.

H. 5 ft., and from head to foot, 6 ft. 6 in.

Original Marble, in the Louvre.

This statue was found on the coast near Antium, early in the 17th century, very near the spot where, a century before, the Apollo Belvedere was found. The stem supporting it is inscribed in Greek letters, "Agasias, son of Dositheas, of Ephesus, made me ;" and therefore it is a specimen of Greek sculpture of the Fourth Epoch, that ended with the Roman conquest. It is now asserted that this statue does not represent a gladiator, but a foot-soldier, defending himself against a horseman; and that gladiators were principally slaves, who fought with more or less armor. Viardot insists that it is Greek, and represents an athlete of the Hellenic games, gladiators not being known to that people, but were of Roman origin.

1033 GROUP OF LAOCOÖN AND HIS SONS.

H. 6 ft. $\frac{1}{2}$ in. to top of head. Date probably B. C. 100.

Original Marble, in the Vatican.

This cast was made for and presented to George the Fourth. The original was executed by three sculptors—Agesandros, Atheodoros, and Polydoros (Agesandros being probably the father of the other two). It was found in 1506, in the ruins of the Palace of Titus, on the Esquiline, Rome, and the Pope ordered a public festival in honor of its discovery. Laocoön was a priest of Apollo, and the god being offended, sent two serpents, which killed him and his two sons at the altar, while offering sacrifice to Neptune.

The right arm of Laocoön was wanting in the group as found. One in terra cotta, by Bernini, was substituted. Michael Angelo designed one in marble, but never finished it. Lübke and other writers insist that the right arm was not originally in the position given to it by the great sculptor, but was bent down behind the head, which was thus supported by the hand in that moment of exhausted agony. This position of the arm is often given in engravings.

1034 APOXYOMENOS. H. 6 ft. $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

This cast represents an athlete scraping from his arm with the strigil the sand and oil of the arena. Athletes were contestants in the public games, and before entering the arena rubbed their naked bodies over with oil. The original, in bronze, executed by Lysippos, was found in the Trastevere, Rome, in 1849. Agrippa had it placed in front of the Thermæ, near the Pantheon, and it was so popular that when Tiberius attempted its removal to his own residence, the people rose and forbade it.

It is believed that the five-spot on the die (tessera) held out in the right hand signifies that the figure came out fifth in the contest, though Waldstein says the die was placed in the restored right hand on the strength of a misinterpretation of some words of Pliny.

1035 BUST OF NERO. H. 1 ft. 11 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

1036 AJAX, or MENELAUS. H. 2 ft. $3\frac{1}{2}$ in.

Original Marble, in the British Museum.

This bust has been erroneously called Ajax. It was found in 1771 by Mr. Gavin Hamilton in the Pantinella, Hadrian's Villa.

1037 SILENUS HOLDING THE INFANT DIONYSOS.

H. 6 ft. 4 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

The original of this cast was found in the 16th century in Rome, in the gardens of Sallust. The hands, half of the right forearm, and right toes of Silenus, and left leg of Dionysos are restorations.

1038 VENUS KALLIPYGE.

H. 5 ft. 1 in. Original Marble, in the Naples Museum.

So called from the Greek definition of its peculiar character. It was once in the Farnese Palace, Rome. The head and the right leg below the knee are supposed to be restorations.

1039 BOY WITH GOOSE.

H. 2 ft. 9½ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

Found in 1789, at Civita Vecchia, Appian Way. It is thought to be copied from a bronze work by Boetius, of Carthage. Heads of the child and goose, with the wing tips, are restorations.

1040 YOUTH SUPPLICATING.

H. 4 ft. 2½ in. Original Bronze, at Berlin.

The original of this statuette is said to have been found in the Tiber. From Clement XI it passed through several hands to the King of Prussia. The right hand and part of the forearm are restorations.

1041 ACHILLES BORGHESE.

H. 6 ft. 9 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

The original of this cast was formerly in the Villa Borghese, whence its name. Its proper name is doubtful. Clarac thought it a copy of a bronze by Alcamenes, favorite pupil of Phidias. Visconti first gave it the name of Achilles, but Winkelman thinks it a statue of Mars, and that the ring or anklet indicated the custom of the Spartans of chaining up the God of War, "that he might never leave them."

1042 MERCURY. H. 6 ft. 6 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

This statue was once called Antinous, but Visconti has proved it to be Mercury. It was found on the Esquiline Hill, near the baths of Titus. The right arm and left hand were never restored, but the right thigh and both lower legs are modern.

1043 CROUCHING VENUS.

H. 2 ft. 8¼ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original statuette was found at Salone, on the road from Rome to Palestrina. The left hand, right forearm, and upper part of the head are modern.

1044 VENUS AT THE BATH.

H. 2 ft. 3 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

Much of this figure is of modern restoration. It is supposed to be a copy of the Venus of Polycharmes, which Pliny says was taken to Rome in his time.

1045 BONE-PLAYER. H. 2 ft. ½ in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

The original of this statue was found at Rome in 730. The right hand, neck, and left shoulder are modern.

1046 COLOSSAL BUST OF ÆSCULAPIUS.

H. 1 ft. 9 in. Original Marble, in the British Museum.

Original, made 300 B. C., was found in Isle of Melos in 1828.

1047 JULIA. H. 4 ft. 5 ½ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original of this statue was found on the coast of Barbary, at Ben Ghuzi, and is sometimes called A Young Roman Girl. Julia was the mother of the Emperor Caracalla, and after his decease starved herself to death through grief.

1048 DEMOSTHENES. H. 6 ft. 5 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

Perhaps a copy of the bronze portrait statue by Polyekktus at Athens, 3d century B. C.—[Waldstein.]

1049 SOPHOCLES.

H. 6 ft. 8 ½ in. Original Marble, in the Lateran, Rome.

Found at Terracina in the court of a private house. Probably a copy of a bronze original of the 4th century at Athens.—[Waldstein.]

1050 ARISTIDES, or ÆSCHINES.

H. 6 ft. 6 in. Original Marble, in the Naples Museum.

Found in Herculaneum.

1051 BUST OF SOCRATES.

H. 1 ft. 8 in.

Original Marble, in the Louvre.

“The portraits of Socrates date back to a bronze statue of him made by Lysippos and erected at Athens after his death. The features of this bust correspond well with the description put into Socrates' own mouth by Plato.”

1052 BUST OF HOMER. H. 1 ft. 11 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

This bust is very like the one in the British Museum. The original was found inserted in a garden wall in Rome.

1053 BUST OF HOMER.

H. 1 ft. 9½ in.

Original Marble, in the British Museum.

The original of this bust was found at Baïæ in 1780. There are many copies, and all are of doubtful authenticity as portraits.

1054. COLOSSAL BUST OF JUPITER.

H. 2 ft. 8½ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original in marble of this cast was found at Otricoli, 40 miles from Rome. There are several copies, and all are supposed to be modelled after the head of the statue of Jupiter, by Phidias, at Elis, which stood for eight hundred years, until it was destroyed in the fifth century of the Christian era.

1055 CARYATID.

H. 7 ft. 5 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original of this figure is from the Erechtheum at Athens.

1056 POLYHYMNIA.

H. 5 ft. 11 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

The statue was once in the Villa Borghese. Only the lower half is said to be antique, the remainder being restored by Augustino Penna from a bass-relief on a sarcophagus in the Capitol.

1057 APOLLO SAUROKTONOS (Lizard-Killer).

H. 4 ft. 10½ in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

350 B. C. Is mentioned by Pliny as a work of Praxiteles. "The meaning of the lizard is somewhat doubtful. It is known that the lizard had certain magic properties attributed to it, and was used in incantations; but in this group many critics prefer to see only a genre subject—Apollo, as a boy, trying to 'stalk' and pierce the lizard, simply as an exercise of agility, the animal being extremely quick in its movements."—[Waldstein.]

1058 FLORA.

H. 5 ft. 5½ in. Original Marble, Capitoline Museum, Rome.

1059 PUDICITIA (Goddess of Modesty).

H. 6 ft. 9 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

1060 CENTAUR AND CUPID.

H. 4 ft. 6½ in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.

The original of this cast was found at Villa Fonesca. There is another in the Vatican, and it is doubtful which is the copy. The winged figure is thought by Viardot to be a Bacchus, and not Cupid, as he has an ivy-wreath.

1061 DAUGHTER OF NIOBE.

H. 5 ft. 6 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.
Found in Rome in 1583.

1062 FAUN OF THE CAPITOL.

H. 5 ft. 7 in. Original Marble, Capitoline Museum.
The original was found at Civita Lavinia in 1701, and is supposed to have been copied from the bronze statue by Praxiteles called Periboetos.

1063 FAUN, WITH KID. H. 4 ft. 5 in. Original Marble, at Madrid.

1064 FAUN (à la Tache). H. 1 ft. 10 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre.
This bust of a laughing Faun takes its French designation from a spot or stain on the right cheek and shoulder of the original marble.

1065 ATHLETE POURING OIL INTO HIS HAND. H. 4 ft. 9½ in.

Taken from the original, in marble, in the Louvre, and represents an athlete preparing for a contest in the public games. It is said that the head, though antique, did not belong to this statue. The left lower leg, right arm, and parts of the feet are modern.

1066 DYING GAUL, or GLADIATOR. H. 1 ft 11 in. L. 5 ft. 11 in.

Original Marble, in the Capitoline Museum, Rome.
It is supposed to be a copy of the bronze figure, by Ctesilaus, of the School of Pergamus, 246 B. C., who chiefly represented battles with the Gauls that invaded Asia Minor. It is also said that it represents a Greek herald, with his horn lying beside him upon the oval shield.

1067 VENUS ANADYOMENE.

H. 4 ft. 10 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.
The title of this Venus signifies rising from the sea, and the goddess is represented nude to the waist, wringing the water from her locks. The figure was thought by Visconti to have been copied from a painting by Apelles, and a bronze statue found at Herculaneum in the Naples Museum resembles it.

1068 MERCURY IN REPOSE.

H. 3 ft. 6 in. Original, Museum, Naples.
The original in bronze of this cast is classed among the finest of ancient date, and was found in Herculaneum in 1758. Its base is the only modern part. The left hand is supposed to have held the caduceus.

1069 APOLLO BELVEDERE.

H. 7 ft. 1 in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original of this statue was discovered at Cape d'Anzo (Antium) in 1503. Bought by Julius II, when still a cardinal, it was placed by him, when Pope, in the Belvedere of the Vatican. The name of its sculptor is unknown. Its date is placed at B. C. 279. Canova and Visconti think it is a copy from an ancient bronze by Calamus. The left hand and wrist, and the fingers of right hand were restored by G. A. da Montorsoli, pupil of Michael Angelo. Undoubtedly many copies of the original were made, and a bronze copy discovered in 1792 at Paromythia, and now at St. Petersburg, in the judgment of some has changed entirely the meaning of the action of the figure. Apollo is here represented as holding a bow and discharging an arrow at the serpent Python, sent by Juno to destroy his mother, Latona. In the bronze statuette referred to, there is no tree trunk (necessary to support a figure in marble), but the left hand holds a shield bearing the head of Medusa, supposed to turn all gazers into stone, and which Homer, in the Iliad, xv, 318, says Jupiter lent to Apollo. Dr. Lübke accepts this explanation of the action of the figure, and says, "Not until now have we understood the statue." Waldstein says: "The statue is not an original work, but a copy, whether from bronze or marble is uncertain."

1070 COLOSSAL MASK OF JUNO. H. 3 ft. 3 in.

From a copy, in marble, in the Villa Ludovisi, Rome, of the original statue by Polyclethus, the Argive sculptor, about 423 B. C.

1071 MELEAGER. H. 6 ft. 6½ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original was found in Rome, and is supposed to be of the time of Hadrian, A. D. 76-136.

1072 BUST OF MENELAUS, or AJAX.

H. 3 ft. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original of this bust was found at Hadrian's Villa, Tivoli, and is commonly, but erroneously, known as Ajax. Visconti satisfactorily proved it to be Menelaus. Bass-reliefs of Hercules fighting with Centaurs are on the helmet.

1073 TORSO OF HERCULES (the BELVEDERE TORSO).

H. 4 ft. 1½ in. Original Marble, in the Vatican.

The original of this torso was found near the end of the 15th century in the Campo di Fiori at Rome, near the site of Pompey's Theatre, from which it most likely came. It is celebrated as having been the subject of Michael Angelo's constant study. From an inscription on its base it was made by Appollonius, son of Nestor, Athens.

- 1074 JASON. H. 5 ft. 2 in., W. 3 ft. Original Marble, in the Louvre.
This statue has been called Mercury, and Cincinnatus, but is now considered to represent the famous leader of the Argonauts, hurriedly tying on but one sandal in his haste to seek his uncle Pelias, usurper of his father's throne, and who had been warned by an oracle to beware of the "one-sandalled man."
It is of the Alexandrian or third era of Greek sculpture, and once stood in the Villa Negroni, was bought with the Germanicus by Louis XIV, and placed at Versailles.
- 1075 BUST OF PERICLES.
H. 1 ft. 10½ in. Original Marble, in the British Museum.
- 1076 BUST OF PERIANDER.

- 1082 BUST OF CLYTIE. Original Marble, in the British Museum.
- 1083 BUST OF SEPTIMIUS SEVERUS.
H. 2 ft. 2 in. Original Marble, in the British Museum.

H. 1 ft. 11½ in. Original Marble, in the British Museum.
The original of this bust was found in the Campagna of Rome in 1776.

1085 BUST OF ISIS.

H. 1 ft. 11 ½ in. Original Marble, in the British Museum.

The Egyptian Goddess, with the lotus flower above her forehead, is here represented unveiled.

1086 THE WRESTLERS. H. 3 ft. Original Marble, in Florence.

The original of this group is attributed to Cephissodotus, of the School of Rhodes, 5th period of Greek art. Having been found near the Niobe group, it was thought by many to have formed a part of it.

CAST FROM THE WEST BRONZE
GATE OF THE BAPTISTERY AT FLORENCE.

LORENZO Ghiberti.

This cast was brought from the South Kensington Museum, London, and consists of ten square panels containing designs from the Old Testament, each design illustrating three or four incidents.

The left highest panel shows the Creation of Adam and Eve, the Forbidden Fruit, and the Expulsion from Eden. On the right panel opposite are the Offerings of Cain and Abel, the Killing of Abel, Man's Labor, and Cain with his Maker.

The left panel below has the Ark after the Deluge, Noah's Sacrifice and Inebriation. On the right are the Sacrifice of Isaac, Servants at the foot of the Mount, and Abraham with the Three Angels.

The left central panel contains Jacob and Esau, and on the right Joseph and his Brethren, their Cruelty, their meeting in Egypt, and the Cup in Benjamin's Sack.

The left panel below the centre shows Moses Receiving the Law, and the People at the Foot of the Mount. On the right are Joshua before Jericho, and the Division of the Tribes.

The lowest panel on the left contains David and Goliath, and on the right Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

Among the statuettes in the upright panels are Samson with the Pillar, Joshua in Armor, Judith with the Head of Holofernes, Jephthah's Daughter. Among the heads are two on a line with the top of the second panel representing the artist Ghiberti (the bald one on the right), and Bartoluccio, his father-in-law.

The outer panels, bearing fruits and flowers, were finished by Ghiberti's son, the artist having died ere the completion of his work, at the age of seventy-four years.

The cast of this gate, as it stands, is 18 feet 2 inches high by 12 feet 6 inches wide, exclusive of the walnut frame, which makes it altogether 19 feet 7 inches high by 14 feet 6 inches wide.

THE THREE GRACES, or CHARITIES.

H. 6 ft. 6 in. Original Marble, in the Louvre. 1560.

GERMAIN PILON.

This example of the Renaissance of French sculpture was executed for Catharine of Medicis in memory of her husband, Henry II of France, whose heart was placed in the original urn, supported on the heads of the three female figures, standing back to back, with linked hands, upon a triangular pedestal. These figures represent Catharine herself, the Duchess d'Etampes, and Madame Villeroy, three of the fairest women of that time. This work was cut out of a single block of marble. The pedestal was made by a different hand, and bears on its three faces inscriptions in Latin, to the following effect:

"Here Catharine has deposited the heart of the king, her husband, wishing she could bury it in her own bosom."

"The united heart of both testifies before men enduring love—a subdued spirit before God."

"The Three Graces (or Charities) rightfully bear on their heads a heart once the seat of the graces (or charities)—a heart that aspired to the highest things."

This monument formerly stood in the Chapelle d'Orleans, Church of the Celestins.

MICHAEL ANGELO.

These statues were designed for a grand monument to Pope Julius II, planned by M. Angelo, but never executed. The artist gave them to a friend who had nursed him in illness, and he presented them to Francis I, who, in turn, gave them to the Constable Montmorency for his Chateau d'Ecouen. During the troubles of the Revolution in 1793 they were found in the stables of the Duc de Richelieu, and were bought for the Republic. They are now in the Louvre, and are the only great works of M. Angelo in France. They were taken to Florence in 1875 to swell the memorials of the sculptor's mighty genius at the centennial celebration of his birthday.

ELECTROTYPE

REPRODUCTIONS.

CASE A.

THE HILDESHEIM TREASURES.

Electrotyped by Christofle & Co., Paris.

These are electrotype reproductions of ancient vessels found on the site of a Roman camp, near Hildesheim, Hanover.

On the 17th of October, 1868, some soldiers, while digging near their camp on the slope of Galgen, found, at the depth of ten feet, some bits of metal that proved to be silver. Further search discovered two large bell-shaped vases or bowls, inverted, under which were other vessels and fragments, strangely heaped together, the feet and handles being detached from the vessels to which they belonged, and all much corroded by the infiltration of a wet soil.

They were restored by an expert as nearly as possible to their original condition, and subsequently taken to the Royal Museum at Berlin. Their discovery made a great sensation, and it was at first supposed that the original Treasures were part of the dinner service of Varus, the Roman general, who was defeated by the Germans, under Arminius, near Hildesheim, in the year A. D. 9, but the style of some of the pieces was so evidently of a later date that the idea is now abandoned. The design and workmanship of most of them certainly show their extreme antiquity.

PHIDIAS.

Born, Athens, about 490 B. C. Died, Athens, about 432 B. C. Pupil of Hegesias and Ageladas. Among the subjects attributed to him are nine statues of Athena, thirteen bronze statues dedicated by the Athenians at Delphi out of their share of the spoils taken from the Persians at Marathon, and the colossal bronze statue of Athena Promachus, 50 or 60 feet high, in the Athenian Acropolis. He also made the colossal chryselephantine, or gold and ivory, statue of Athena, which stood in the front chamber of the Temple of Minerva at Athens, and for the Eleans at Olympia, the colossal chryselephantine statue of Jupiter, nearly 60 feet high; and the architectural sculptures of the Parthenon have been generally ascribed to him. Pericles made him general director of all the great art works in progress at Athens. Phidias fell a victim to the envy of his enemies. He was first accused of purloining part of the gold used in the colossal statue of Minerva, and was acquitted; but because he placed his name, with that of his patron Pericles, upon the shield of the goddess, he was accused of profanity, thrown into prison, and died there.
